Owning the Future. This Week in Rio!

From Friday to Sunday this week, our annual conference will be held in the Museum of Tomorrow in Rio de Janeiro. You can read the program online in English or download the PDF to explore the 66 speakers from 11 countries in both Portuguese and English.

Convened by ITS Rio de Janeiro and Platform Cooperativism Consortium, the single overarching question of this conference is how we might reclaim democracy, fairness, and economic justice in the digital economy. Participants explore the possibilities of building a cooperative digital economy in the Global South where data and labor have been over-extracted and exploited.

The Mayor of Rio will open the event.

It may be thrilling to network, learn, and meet new people at conferences. But if you are unable to go, it is not as thrilling. And this year, the event will be held solely in person. In light of this, for your benefit, we will release recordings of sessions, interviews, and other resources over the next weeks and months.

Want to share on the socials? Start here or over there.

And yes, the venue!
